

Kaoru Mori Presents:
Otoyome-Gatari: A Bride's Story

Anis has made her prepa-
rations,
but what sort of gift is she sending?

Fruit?

A
golden trinket
of some sort?

To her first friend,
She proposes a bond of sisterhood.

Chapter 41
[The Ceremony]

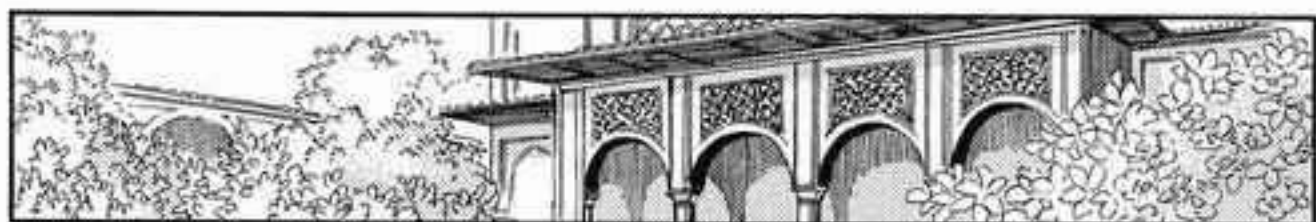

森 薫

乙嫁語り

The Bride's Stories by Kaoru Mori

Volumes 1-6 and "Anything And Something" now in English!
Support the author!!

If the answer is "yes", it will be returned with a gilt pin

The second, a carefully prepared doll

Otherwise, draped in a black cloth.

A pin if they accept,
A cloth if they do not.

If she doesn't accept...

If she accepts, a gold pin...

But this means she accepts, all the same.

13

We have gathered in this shrine, dedicated to a respected imam.

On the day we honor the prophet,

Fitting circumstances to honor the sanctity of your vows.

And Shirin.

Anis,

For, as you face life's trials together, and guide one another in virtue and honor, heaven will smile upon you.

Walking the path of life together will bring the both of you happiness.

Every woman must have her match in another.

Just do it like we practiced.

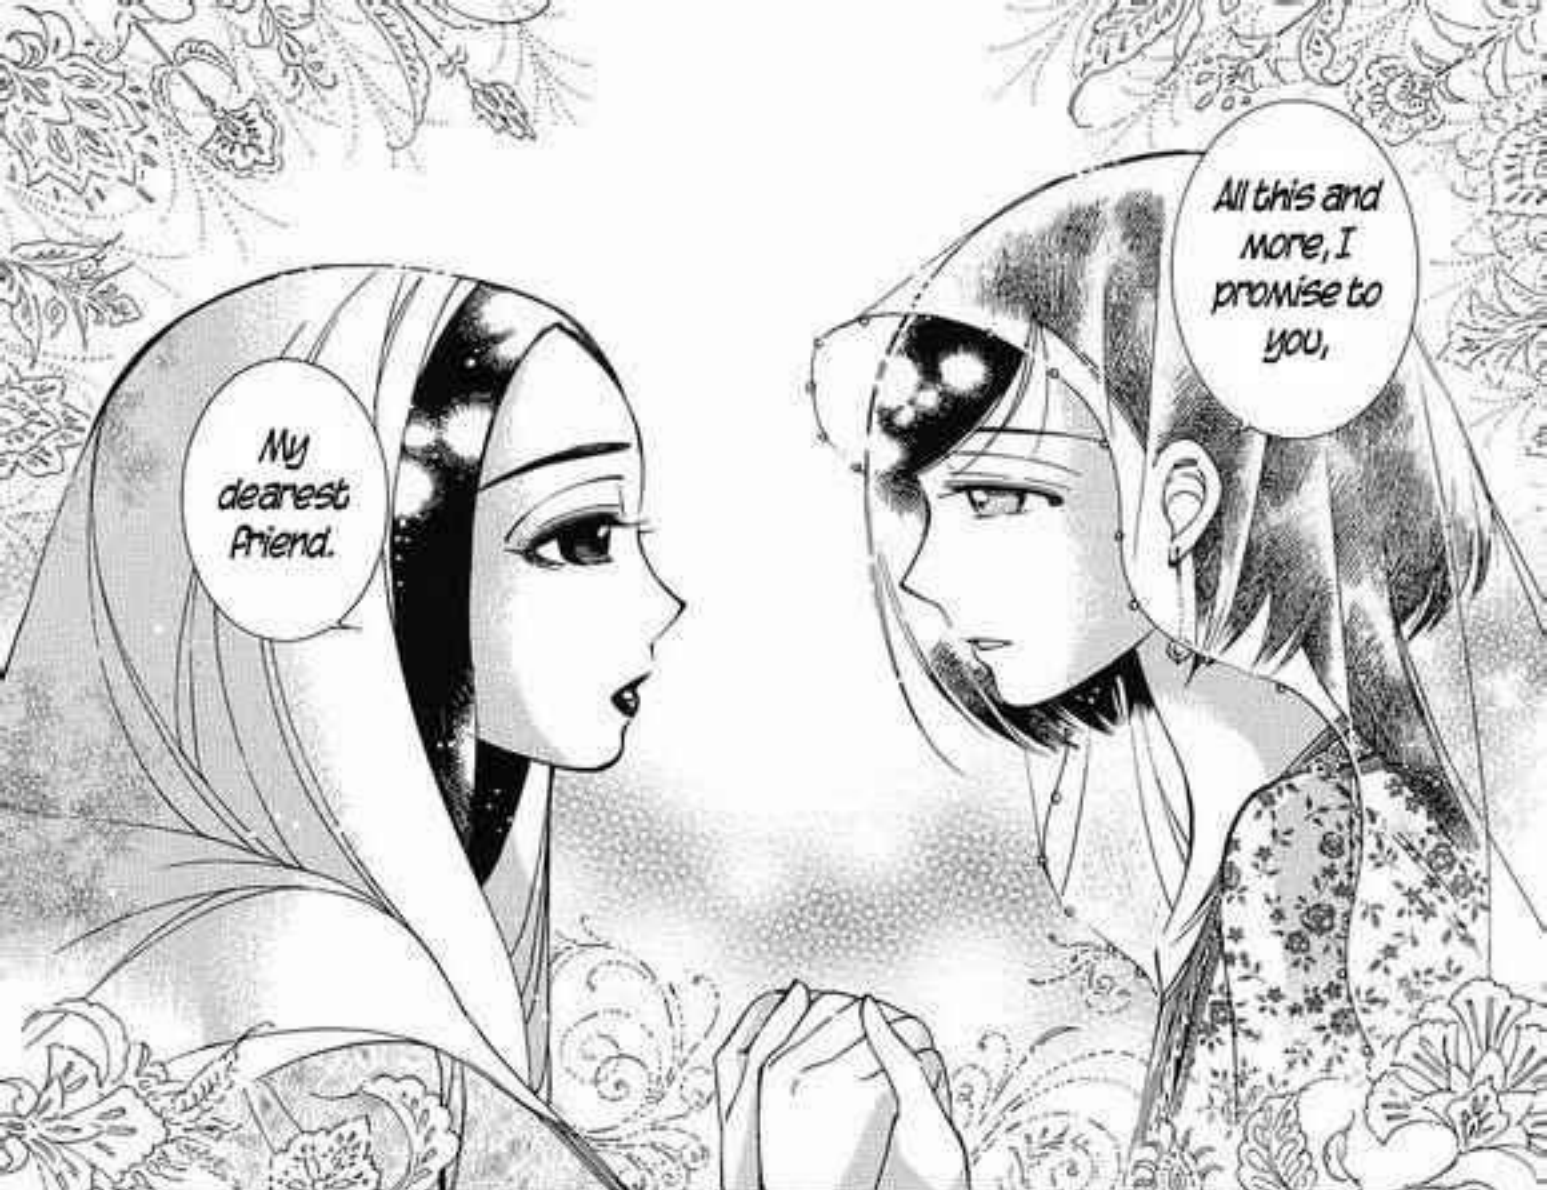

As you swear your bond to one another.

And all of us will bear witness

I will conduct this ceremony,

If there is nothing else,

If I didn't enjoy your company, how could I agree
to this?

It's because
I like
you,

Anis.

And always say what's on your mind.

You find so much pleasure in the simplest
things,

Every time
we meet at the
baths,

To Be Continued